Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 23 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Turning unsettled later in the week.

Today:
A bright start in the east with patchy frost in some areas first thing, and any fog patches quick to clear. Cloudy in the west and cloudy for all by the afternoon with a chance of some light patchy drizzle. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Tonight:
Staying cloudy tonight with some spells of drizzle in places. A band of light rain will approach the region from the west by dawn time. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Wednesday:
That band of light rain will push through the region, clearing to the east by the afternoon. Cloud will soon lift with brighter skies thereafter. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Showers with possible hail and thunder on Thursday and Friday. Stronger winds on Friday and feeling colder. Drier on Saturday, with showers and winds easing in the morning.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.